

Testimonial

Ian Brown of Komita Management.

To whom it may concern.

I have worked with Ian Brown of Komita Management on two occasions over the past two years.

Once in my role as Operations Director of a Confectionery company and again most recently in my role as Chief Executive of Seafood company.

The fact I returned for a second time with an unrelated business is testament to my view of the Ian and the 'Journey Making' process.

All too often businesses fail to completely review where it is they really want go. This is often as a result of both time and from a fear of dealing with both complexities and potential differences of opinion.

The 'Journey Making' process copes well with complexity and allows everyone to contribute fully in a very open and timely way.

Finally, the clarity of what actions are required in order to fulfil strategic ambitions flow naturally from the process together with a sense of common purpose.
